

Meghan Solc

Diplomate ACVD | Ontario

Meghan grew up on a hobby farm in Brockville, Ontario. She received her Doctorate in Veterinary Medicine in 2012 from the Atlantic Veterinary College in P.E.I., and continued to further her education by attending a rotating internship in Toronto. Her focus in dermatology grew in her final year of veterinary school and continued through her rotating internship. A career in dermatology was solidified during her second internship in dermatology in Toronto. During this year, her interest in multi-drug resistant organisms took the forefront. Meghan completed her residency with Dermatology for Animals and passed the board examination to become a Diplomate of the American College of Veterinary Dermatology. She is passionate about continuing education and speaks often at local and occasional national venues to educate veterinarians. She currently sees patients in several Dermatology for Animals locations in Ohio.
